BREAKFAST WITH THE SAVIOR

For immediate release: A new cookbook combines mouth-watering recipes with delicious devotionals to help readers start each day feeling nourished in mind, body and spirit. Lemon blueberry bread pudding, peanut butter French toast sandwiches and pineapple brunch punch are among some of the scrumptious recipes offered in the pages of Faith, Hope, Love, and a Whisk: Breakfast With the Savior (Ambassador International; October 2014; $29.99).

In John 21:12, Jesus said to His disciples to “Come and eat breakfast,” and this cookbook devotional invites you to do the same, literally and figuratively. “The devotionals I have written are for women who want to develop a deeper relationship with Jesus and live their life for Him,” explains author Tori Winkelman, who earned a degree in Biblical Studies from Azusa Pacific University. “Everything we do, we do for the Lord—even cooking!”

Tori hopes readers will open up Faith, Hope, Love, and a Whisk to find a breakfast recipe, reading a devotional and spending time in prayer as they prepare their meal. The book’s devotionals cover a variety of topics, offering guidelines for prayer, tips for toxic relationships and wisdom for finding contentedness in a materialistic world.

Every recipe in the book is accompanied by beautiful full-color photography. Tori’s family members even make appearances throughout the book. Many of the dishes featured in the book are not only recipes, but family traditions. From waking up on Christmas morning to the scent of caramelized pecan French toast to preparing her unique take on pigs in a blanket for her husband, Tori invites readers into her kitchen and her life by sharing personal reflections.

About the Author: Tori Winkelman lives in Upland, CA with her husband Aaron and their dog Buffy. She received her Bachelor of Arts Degree in Biblical Studies from Azusa Pacific University. Faith, Hope, Love, and a Whisk: Breakfast with the Savior combines her two passions in life: God’s Word and cooking.

Endorsements

"It is very rare in today's cultural climate to see and know a woman who wants to serve other women with faith, food, and devotion to our Lord with style . . . Tori will guide you into creating for your family and friends what it is like to love your God through each recipe and devotional thought. This beautiful book is truly a breakfast with the Savior."

---Emilie Barnes, speaker, author of More Hours in My Day

"Faith, Hope, Love and a Whisk . . . what a natural combination. Jesus himself taught while loving and delivering loaves and fishes. In fact, food prepared is a daily act of love and many a life lesson has been talked and even prayed over in the kitchen. Tori even acknowledges that culinary taste and heartfelt worship are individual, leaving readers an option for notes off to the side. The recipes were not afterthoughts, but truly seem to be shared family favorites. Thanks for the invite to breakfast . . . I'm looking forward to dinner!"

---Kimberly Kelly, host of Kimberly's Cookhouse, online cooking contributor for Ingles Markets

"This is truly inspirational. Quiet time in the kitchen with the Lord will always make the food for the body tasty, as we all need a little food for the soul."

---Francine Bryson, TV personality, author of Blue Ribbon Baking from a Redneck Kitchen

"This book is a beautiful reminder that we not only need to nourish our bodies, but our souls as well. It's filled with Tori's delicious recipes and God's everlasting word, both so filling in their own right."

---Holly Durst, reality star, author of Chocolate Socks
