For immediate release: Life seemed to deliver one challenge after another for Deandre Collier. Growing up in Detroit, Michigan, Deandre faced his first challenge when his father abandoned him at a very young age. After that, the struggles continued to relentlessly pour in year after year without any sign of stopping. When Deandre lost his eyesight as a boy, he could have let that keep him down for life and allow it to hold him back from achieving his full potential; instead, he used his circumstances to show God's grace and mercy to others.

In his book From Victim to Victor: Walking by Faith and Not by Sight (Ambassador International, January 19, 2018, $12.99), Dr. Deandre Collier shares the highs and lows of his life, the struggles he faced, and the people who showed him Jesus' love. Collier gives God the glory throughout the book and uses scripture to share the gift of salvation to his readers. When asked how he completes day-to-day tasks Collier answered, "I literally walk by faith and not by sight . . . I depend on God for everything from crossing the streets to learning how to navigate inside unfamiliar buildings." God has truly been Collier's eyes and he praises Him for "the opportunity to see things spiritually that people who have physical eyesight cannot see."

While he provokes the reader with questions that challenge their walk with God, Collier also shares lessons that he has personally learned throughout his failures and triumphs. His modest and humble approach is just another example of the work he has allowed God to do in his life. Collier refuses to be a victim and encourages men and women all over the world to look to their Savior for hope and healing. From Victim to Victor proves that no matter what the challenge, God has a purpose and will not allow anyone to remain a victim if they choose not to be.
